

Monsanto Drive.

It takes you a very long way.

This sign marks the road that leads into our International Headquarters in St. Louis.

These words, "Monsanto Drive" have another and more significant meaning at Monsanto. It's a way of expressing the special qualities of Monsanto people, who have the will to meet challenges head-on—to accomplish and succeed.

We offer bright and energetic people with this drive the opportunity to help solve some of the world's major problems concerning food, energy, the environment and others.

Challenging assignments exist for engineers, scientists, accountants and marketing majors at locations throughout the U.S.

We offer you opportunities, training and career paths that are geared for upward mobility. If you are a person who has set high goals and has an achievement record, and who wants to advance and succeed, be sure to talk with the Monsanto representative when he visits your campus or write to: Buck Feters, University Relations and Professional Employment Director, Monsanto Company, 800 North Lindbergh, St. Louis, MO 63166.

Monsanto

An equal opportunity employer