

Kitty Hawk, North Carolina. View looking east on 31 October, 1991 during the "Halloween" storm. Waves are washing across the "beach" road Hwy 12. The flood waters also cut off the "by-pass" road Hwy 158 which is the only other north-south route on the island. The ocean-front building in the upper left is the U.S. Life Saving Station #6 built before the turn of the century. The building was moved about a mile southwest shortly after the storm. (Photograph by Carl Miller, WES/CERC Field Research Facility, Duck, North Carolina).